attached young person, living more or less in the glare of a life where the word home was but a symbol of something that had been or might be, but most distinctly was not. She went on the witness stand at the inquest and dismissed, with a well-bred smile, the insinuation that the letter she wrote Henry Barnet was anything more than a friendly note. She parried thrusts with gentle craft, and resented invendoes with the brusque dignity of a woman of the great world. She held her proud head high and would not let one hint of agitation show on her clever, shrewd, observant, woman-who-knows-the-world face. She defended her husband and her reputation with a manner that was half polite incredulity and half hurt reserve.

She made a fine impression on every one in the courtroom and then she went home and told everyone who came to see her that she 'had nothing to say.' . . Whatever happens, the lovers of the dramatic now find themselves confronted with a most interesting mystery. For that is what Blanche Molineux is when all is said and done-a mystery.

"A woman whom everyone knows and no one knows. A woman with a brow like a Madonna and sphynx-like eyes. A woman with the New England reserve in every pose of her chic New York figure. A woman with the expression of a clever corldling and the bubbling laugh of a entle little child. A woman who is one ling one day and quite another thing the A woman who is called painfully plain by one stranger in the courtroom and extremely pretty by another stranger in the next chair. A woman who can sing hymns like a St. Cecelia and do a coon song as well as May Irwin. A woman who never had a decent frock till she was over twenty and who dresses like a very wellbred princess at thirty. A woman whose friends thought she was deeply in love with one man-and who married another man within less than three weeks of that man's death. A woman who has been loved by many, and who has loved-whom? Only the woman in the case can tell that, and she-'has nothing to say.' "Here is Blanche Chesbrough's much-talked-of enigma of a letter to Mr. Bar-"I am distressed to learn of your illness. I arrived home on Saturday. I am so exceedingly sorry to know that you have been indisposed. Won't you let me know when you are able to be about? I want so much to see you. Is it that you do not believe me? If you would but let me prove to you my sincerity! Do not be cross any more, and accept, I pray you, my very best BLANCHE.' wishes. Yours, "It was received on his deathbed. Nineteen days after he died she married Moli-

the work of the year carefully reviewed. The treasurer presented his report, showing a balance on hand of $2,000. The question of a better definition of an amateur here this afternoon in the seventy-fifth was referred back to the committee which | year of his age. has been considering it, and instructions were given to report at the next annual meeting. The same committee was instructed to compile a "blue book" of decisions for referees.

A number of changes in the rules governing swimming and pole vaulting competitions and water polo games were made as follows:

The plunge shall terminate when the face of the contestant appears above the surface of the water, or at the expiration of sixty seconds, which shall be the limit of time allowed. The time shall start when the contestant leaves the take-off. At the finish of each trial the contestant shall leave the water as quickly as possible, at the opposite end of the take-off. Anyone adjourned to-night for another meeting to- disturbing the water so as to interfere with the following contestant shall be disqualified. Leaving the ground in an attempt shall constitute a try. A competitor may omit his trials at any height, but if he fail at the next height he shall not be allowed to go back and try the height he omitted.. The poles shall have no assisting device, except that they may be wound or wrapped with any substance for the purpose of affording a firmer grasp and may have spikes at the lower end. No competitor shall, during his vault raise the hand which was uppermost when he left the ground to a higher point on the pole; nor shall he raise the hand which was undermost when he left the ground to any point on the pole above the other hand. In case of a tie the officials shall raise or lower the bar at their discretion and those competitors who have tied shall be allowed one trial at each height. In handicaps where a tie occurs the scratch man or the man with the smallest allowance shall be given the place.

The goals shall be spaces four feet long and twelve inches wide, marked "goal" in large letters. To score a goal the goal must be touched by the ball in the hand of an opposing played, and the greatest number of goals shall count game. The ball shall be kept in or as near the surface of the water as possible, and shall never intentionally be carried under water. No goal shall be allowed when scored by an underwater pass.

"The contesting teams shall consist of six on a side, with two reserve men, who can be substituted at any time when the ball is not in play. A player withdrawn shall not return to play. Only six prizes shall be offered. Time of play shall be sixteen minutes actual time, divided in two halves of eight minutes each, and five minutes' rest between halves. Time occupied by disputes, free trials for goal, repairing suits and lining up after a goal has been scored shall not be reckoned as time of play. The captains shall be playing mem-bers of the teams they represent and shall toss for choice of ends of tank. The ends shall be changed at half time. The referee shall throw the ball in the center of the tank and the start for the ball shall be made only at the sound of the whistle. A going out of the tank shall be returned given to the opposing team. A mark shall be made four feet from each goal on the side of the tank, and an imaginary line between these marks shall be called the fourfoot line. No man will be allowed within this line until the ball is within it. The goal-tenders on the side are alone exempt from this rule. When the ball is within the goal line the goal-tenders shall not be allowed any artificial support other than the bottom of the tank. No player is allowed to interfere with an opponent unless such an opponent is within four feet of the ball, except when the ball is within the goal section, when indiscriminate tackling will be allowed in the goal section. Upon a goal being gained, the opposite team shall go to their own end of the tank and the ball shall be thrown by the referee into the center of the tank and play started as at beginning of game. Each team shall have two judges, one at each goal line, who, upon a goal, in case the judges disagree, shall the referee have power to decide whether a goal be fairly made or not. The referee shall decide all fouls, and, if in his opinion a player commits a foul, shall caution the team for the first offense and give the opponents a free trial for goal at each succeeding foul. It shall be a foul to tackle an opponent if the ball is within four feet of him, or to hold him by any part of his costume. It shall be a foul to cross the four-foot line ahead of the ball, unless forced over by an opponent, or to hang on the sides of the tank, except for the purpose of resting. Unnecessary rough work may, within the discrimination of the referee, either be counted a foul, or the referee may put the offender out of the tank until a goal is scored, or the half ends. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: rresident, Walter H. Liginger, Milwaukee Athletic Club; secretary and treasurer, James E. Sullivan, K. A. C.; chairman board of governors, James E. It also states that the Manual Training authorities are perfectly willing to leave the matter entirely with Professor Hull, but it asks that he make a thorough investigation of the facts in the case. Neither of the principals would discuss the question yesterday, and what the outcome of the communication will be is not known. It is very likely, however, that the matter will be brought before the teachers of the S. H. S. and an answer to the letter sent in a

JIM CROW "ROOTS" FOR PURDUE. An Indianapolis Woman's Story of the Doings of a Pet Bird.

"I could not attend the Purdue-Indiana football game last Saturday,' said an Indianapolis woman who takes an interest in the sport, "but I 'rooted' just as hard as any who saw the contest, and I had unique assistance. When my son started for Lafayette last fall he left behind a pet crow, black as all respectable crows should be, and as noisy at times as a whole flock of the cimmerian birds. Last week when I read that Princeton had secured a live tiger as a mascot, but which proved to be a hoodoo, I felt inclined to bedeck Jim Crow-that's the pet crow's namein old gold ribbons and ship him to Purdue. Jim is black, and the old gold added, you know, makes the university colors. Jim, however, was obstinate and could not be induced to enter a box or cage for shipment, so I let him remain. I had been trying to teach him to say, 'Rah! Rah! Purdue,' 'Bully for old Purdue,' and other college yells, but his pronunctation was bad, and I gave up the task. Instead of of the West, will not be played in Detroit. 'Rah! Rah!' Jim insisted on yelling 'Caw! Caw!' and his 'Purdue' was a mere gutturalized jargon, while his 'Bully for old' was even more jargoned than the 'Purdue.' On Saturday I fastened a piece of gold ribbon about the crow's neck and told it to make as much noise as it wanted. About twenty minutes after 2 o'clock Jim began yelling and kept up his noise at intervals until after 4 o'clock, when he split the air with a torrent of short caws, which I recognized as Jim's signal that a stranger was in the yard. Looking out the window I saw a pretty white kitten, with a crimson ribbon about its neck, running down the walk. Jim kept up his cawing until pussy disappeared, and then subsided for the evening.

George Heron, will soon go to Russia to New York Evening Post. What most forcibly strikes one about the destructive fire which last night swept over the unfinished East river bridge is the apparent needlessness of the disaster. If, as seems likely, the cause of the fire was simply the carelessness of a workman with his pipe or portable furnace, the case illustrates anew the limitations of the most perfect system of supervision. At the end of all administrative machinery you come down to the human agent, who frequently has just about as much sense of moral responsibility as the historic Chicago cow. The damage to the bridge cables and the consequent delay appear to be less than was feared last night. But it is obvious that the public and the city government should insist upon the strictest test of the scorched and twisted structure before the work is continued. Naturally no one will be more zealous in this matter than the engineering force of the bridge, which must realize that this is a case where official optimism would be criminal. If the fire stands chiefly as a melancholy monument to somebody's shiftlessness it at least afforded to the fire department a splendid opportunity for heroism, which it fully utilized. Too much cannot be said n praise of the men who climbed the plet amid a rain of red-hot boits and incandescent wire, and fought the fire hand to hand in that treacherous maze of heated metal

Speaking of the Molineux Case.

Philadelphia Record. There is one rule that ought to be folowed by prosecuting officers. The law requires that nobody shall be convicted of a crime if there be a reasonable doubt of his guilt; conversely, nobody ought to be obliged to stand trial unless there is a reasonable, not a fanciful, suspicion of his complicity. The charge against Molineux was twice dismissed by successive grand juries, and only on a third attempt—and by the submission of evidence subsequently ruled out by the New York Court of Appeals-was an indictment secured. proceedings indicate that the prosecuting officer was not actuated by a sole desire to elicit the truth, but was influenced quite as strongly by the determination to establish a case that would square with a preconceived theory. This is an utterly false point of view, and the prosecutor who adopts the same wittingly or unwittingly becomes a persecutor. With unlimited means at command for the hire of experts to substantiate his opinions a biased state's attorney may easily become a terror for the innocent as well as for the guilty.
